I will begin working with Healthy Communities and the Department of Public Safety to begin drafting a comprehensive, citywide public safety plan that will begin to be executed on day one and that incorporates and supports the expansion of the crisis response initiative. I led the effort to lead the first behavioral health crisis program in Providence, and as Mayor, I will work towards the expansion of that program so that 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, when you call 9-1-1, people are connected to the type of response that they need. Oftentimes, people need help and not handcuffs. I have also advocated for the removal of school resource officers from our schools, working alongside youth advocates in our community, and as Mayor, I will continue to push for more social-emotional supports in our schools.
